DEVELOP LAUGH LINES:

The new, young preacher at the Dry Gulch congregation was so nervous about delivering his first sermon that he’d not gotten much sleep for several nights. Matter of fact, he was so tired he could barely make it up the steps to the pulpit. Fortunately, he found his text and began preaching. But nervousness soon overtook him, and the outline flew right out of his mind.

Now, in Bible school, he’d been taught that if a lapse of memory occurs, it is wise to repeat your last point. And so, he did. “Behold,” he quoted, “I come quickly,” but his mind was still a blank. He tried one more time, still no memory of what was to come next. Another attempt, but no results.

Finally, he stepped way back, made a lunge toward the pulpit, shouted out, “Behold, I come quickly,” tripped and fell into the lap of a little old lady in the front row. Flustered and embarrassed, he picked himself up, apologized profusely and started to explain what had happened.

“That’s all right, young man,” said the kindly old lady. “It was really my fault. You warned me 3 times that you were on your way down here. I should have just gotten out of your way.”
